Appomattox is Proud of Its Veterans . . .

Today, November 11, is Veterans Day and is a symbol of a time when there will be no more wars. The veterans of this county have joined their comrades from all over this great nation, to offer a sacrifice for the time when nations can live in peace and harmony and the sacred rights of man will be respected. November 11th is more than another anniversary of the ending of World War I. It is a time for honoring all veterans and going on record with a debt of gratitude. So we salute the Veterans of Appomattox Country and pray that their services to this great country will never be forgotten.

The Veterans served their nation that it might be strong in a world of changing times. Today the Veterans stand at the forefront of those who want to keep America strong. True Americanism seeks to blend might and right into an impregnable union. One way to keep Ammerica strong is to start at the grass roots and keep the community strong. That is why we bring these messages to you, so that you will join us in building a strong Appomattox . . . strong in its institutions, the character of its fine people, and strong in its economic prosperity. You can help make our community stronger by trading at home, by supporting all the commnuity projects of our growing town. And for our part, we are seeking constantly to give you friendly service so that you will want to visit us often.

Rural Health in Virginia

(Editor's note: This is the seventh in a series of articles on rural health in Virginia).

Blacksburg.– Several public agencies have a part in health programs, in addition to the specialized health agencies, such as the State Department of Health, the Department of Mental Hygiene and Hospitals, and the medical schools.

Dr. W. E. Garnett, rural sociologist at VPI, in a study on "The Road to Rural Health in Virginia: 1900-1952," points out that of the $20,258,000 spent by state health agencies in 1950, the State Department of Health was responsible for only 25.5%.

What are these agencies and what do they do?

The State Department of Education maintains a division of health and physical education, and safety to supervise health activities, and to help local school systems develop work in this field. Notable activities are instruction of students; physical inspection by teachers of children under their care and cooperation with local health departments and parents in having defects corrected; promotion of health education among adults; and improvement of nutrition through the school lunch program.

Dr. Foreman

A vocational rehabilitation program is also conducted and includes medical assistance to correct physical disabilities and consultations on re-education. In 1950-51, more than 2,300 disabled persons were helped through this program at a cost of $586,349. Of this amount $385,139 came from Federal funds, and $210,210 from state funds. The 1,449 persons rehabilitated during the year earned $2,245,895 the first year after rehabilitation. The work of the program is conducted through field agents and cooperating doctors and teachers. Training is given at the Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center at Fisherville.

The Agricultural Extension Service at VPI contributes to health in several ways, especially through its home demonstration and 4-H club work. It conducts educational work with rural people, stimulates interest in periodic physical examinations, and guides community effort in behalf of health and medical care.

The Agricultural Experiment Station at VPI conducts research studies dealing with health and medical care, housing, nutrition, and other subjects.

The State Department of Agriculture establishes and enforces standards on sanitation and purity of milk and other foods; and conducts a program for controlling animal diseases harmful to humans such as tuberculosis and brucellosis. Its control work on fruit sprays prevents human poisoning.

The University of Virginia Extension Service helps the University Medical Department in cooperation with the State Medical Society in arranging and conducting post-graduate courses and special lectures for doctors; sponsors or helps with meetings to further popular understanding of health.

The State Department of Public Welfare administers the publically supported medical aid program for the indigent and medically needy and also helps coordinate efforts of volunteer organizations in behalf of the same group.

The State Department of Labor conducts a factory inspection service to maintain sanitary and safe working conditions.

The State Compensation Board administers a program through which those injured in industrial employment receive compensation.

The State Highway Department carries on a continuous program to reduce the number of highway accidents.

The Department of Professional and Occupational Registration through its examinations and system of licensing, maintains standards for the various groups concerned with health; or more specifically the state boards of examiners of medical practitioners, dentists, pharmacists, nurses, optometrists, and clinical psychologists maintain such standards.

The Virginia Commission for the Blind, in addition to its other types of work, sponsors eye clinics and other sight-saving activities. The commission claims about half of blindness can be prevented. It maintains two work shops for the blind and conducts education programs which include the distribution of talking-book machines, supervision of certain types of employment, and direct aid—the later amounting to $550,812 for the year ending June 30, 1951.

It's got a "V" in its bonnet—or your choice of two new sixes!

The motoramic Chevrolet for '55

Great new 8

It's the valve-in-head V8 as only the valve-in-head leader can build it!

You'd expect Chevrolet to out-V8 the field—and it has! Chevrolet's new "Turbo-Fire V8" puts a brand-new kind of excitement under your foot. The excitement of 162 horsepower! The excitement of an 8 to 1 ultra-high compression ratio that squeezes more pure fun out of a gallon of gas than you ever dreamed possible! The new "Turbo-Fire V8" is so wonderfully efficient that it requires only four quarts of oil instead of the usual five or more. And it has the shortest piston stroke in the low-price field, for longer engine life. But we can't even begin to give you the whole story here. Come in and let the new "Turbo-Fire V8" speak for itself. You'll like what it has to say!

Two new 6's 6

With enough new advances to fill a book!

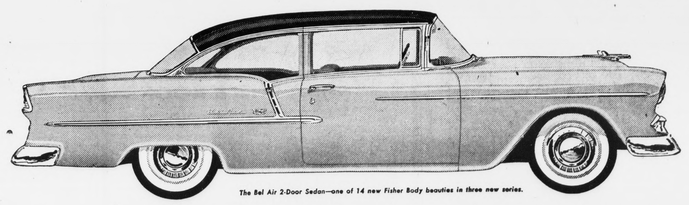
Chevrolet offers two new highstepping sixes for 1955! There's the new "Blue-Flame 136" (teamed with Powerglide as an extra-cost option) and the new "Blue-Flame 123." Both bring you new, higher-rated power—the zippy, thrifty high-compression kind. Both have new, more efficient cooling and lubrication systems . . . new engine mounts that result in almost unbelievable smoothness. And, like the new "Turbo-Fire V8," both are sparked by a new 12-volt electrical system for finer performance and faster cold-weather starting. All in all, they're the liveliest, smoothest sixes Chevrolet ever put into a passenger car. As you know, that covers a lot of territory. And so will you—with either of these two new sixes!



The Bel Air 2-Door Sedan—one of 14 new Fisher Body beauties in three new series.

More than a new car . . . a new CONCEPT of low-cost motoring
(and much too good to miss driving!)
